WOMEN MOB NON-UNION MINE WORKERS

INFURIATED BAND HURLS STONES AND ROTTEN EGGS

Deputy Sheriff Was Seriously Bitten—"Amazon" Puts Up Fierce Battle and It Took Three Men To Take Her To Jail—Rioters Dispersed By Officers and Three Women Arrested—Suits For Injuries Allege County Commissioners Did Not Give Adequate Protection—No Money In Athens County To Pay Deputies.

Between 50 and 75 women took up the union fight against opening of coal mines on a non-union basis at Martins Ferry, Thursday, and attacked a group of 15 non-union workers on their way to the Florence mine under guard of Sheriff Clyde C. Hardesty and eight deputies.

The women surrounded the group of 23 men, pelted them with eggs and stones, fought a hand-to-hand scuffle with them, and bit and scratched.

Three of the women, Josephine Holewick, Catherin Niska and Margaret Luposki are in jail as a result of the attack, and the men are suffering minor injuries. A deputy sheriff was bitten seriously.

The rest of the mob fled when Hardesty and the deputies charged with cudgels.

When Sheriff Hardesty attempted to usher a 250 pound women assailant into an automobile, she turned on him and started a struggle. Two deputies came to Hardesty's assistance and between them they were able to take her to the jail. Several more arrests are expected.

After the mob had been dispersed the 15 non-union men were taken to the Florence mine, where they began the work of putting the newly erected bunk houses in order for the expected influx of non-union men when an attempt is made to open the mine.

At the Provident mine, St. Clairsville, 20 men went to work cleaning away the underbrush which has sprung up since the mine became idle several months ago and pumping water out of the shaft. This is another mine which is to be opened shortly.

Following filing of suit against the county commissioners by Emory E. Brewer, non-union miner, for injuries

Misery loves company, but not any more than happiness does.

incurred when he was attacked August 2, by union sympathizers, at least 10 other suits are expected to be filed. Brewer charges the commissioners with failure to give adequate protection. He seeks $1,000.

Because many of the deputies named by Sheriff William Williams to guard the Lick Run and Lurig mines were "worth nothing" in the opinion of bankers, Athens county commissioners have been unable to borrow money to pay the deputies.

Eighteen of the 32 deputies have been dropped because of lack of funds to pay and commissioners say it may be necessary to drop others unless arrangements are made speedily to obtain money.

According to the commissioners, the bankers who have been approached for loans contend that most of the deputies are union coal miners and therefore their sympathy would be with the union miners and consequently worth less for protection of property should a crisis arise in which violence was threatened.

Mrs. Shride, who was asleep in an upstairs room, was awakened by the intruder, whose footsteps could be plainly heard. She called up her neighbor, Chris Meinfelder, who responded immediately, but the intruder escaped thru a side window, thru which he had entered the house.

Mrs. Shride had left the house about 4:30 o'clock and the intruder was probably watching his chance to enter, not knowing that Mrs. Shride was at home.

REPUBLICAN LINE FORMS PRESIDENCY

Hoover and Dawes are Seen as the Leading Possibilities at This Time.

The lists are now open and volunteers for the presidency are forming in line. Some of the faithful in whose breasts the spark of hope had well nigh flickered out are now in full flame and frenzy. The old war horses of the party, just a little touched in the wind and not quite sound as to legs, have sniffed the battle from afar and are now prancing and sashaying around with their tails over the dashboard. Senator Fess is moaning quietly as he eyes the empty White House; Senator Willis known as the "loud speaker" is experimenting with a new form of throat lozenge; Speaker Longworth, also of Ohio, is as busy as a bird dog being genial and democratic and popular; Senator Watson, of Indiana is engaged in forgetting the Klan; and so it goes.

The Republican party is rich in men of presidential caliber: Secretary Hoover, Vice President Dawes, Mr. Lowden, Secretary Mellon and ex-Secretary Hughes are obviously men whose characters and accomplishments would grace the office. Of these, several are probably unavailable. Mr. Mellon is a shade too old. Mr. Hughes has the handicap of a previous defeat. Mr. Lowden is a sectional rather than a national candidate and is also handicapped by age. Mr. Hoover and Mr. Dawes remain, and either one of them would make a great president. Both are men of well-rounded experience in great affairs; both are versatile, courageous and highly intelligent. They are conservative because they have studied the past, but they are bold in upholding change which their experience approves.

It remains to be seen whether the Republican party will recognize and support such men or whether, as in 1920, the leaders will turn to a safe "regular" nonentity who can be relied upon to keep the country safe for Republicans. In the former case the party will serve the interests of the whole country; in the latter it will serve its own selfish and temporary expediences. Either Mr. Hoover or Mr. Dawes could defeat any Democrat, Al Smith not excepted, and the election of either would insure a sound, constructive administration as well as a firm and honorable policy at home and abroad.—The Independent.

"It makes me laugh to hear some men say they haven't any temper," says old Al Pitcher. "No man knows if he's got a temper till he meets up with a determined agent for something no household is complete without."—Farm and Fireside.

Tuberculosis Spreads to Millions in Russia

Leningrad.—Malaria, tuberculosis and trachoma are ravishing Soviet Russia, it is stated by Dr. W. Horsley Gantt, a young physician of Charlottesville, Pa., who has just completed a two-volume work on health and sanitary conditions in Russia. Doctor Gantt says there are more than 4,000,000 cases of malaria within the Soviet union, which is four times the number before the war. The number of persons affected with tuberculosis runs into the millions, and the disease is steadily increasing. More than half a million Russians are suffering from trachoma, Doctor Gantt finds, while in the United States there are only 1,000 cases.

Whole Family Has Tails Like Beasts'

Sydney, Australia.—Reports of a family in which every member except the mother possesses a perfect tail, which, in the case of the father, can be wagged like a dog's, has excited the interests of medical men here.

The father, a ten-year-old son and two daughters, three and six, have tails. The grandparents of the children were normal, and the father and the children are normal except for the tails which grow from the bases of their spines.

"It is a case of atavism," one medical man said. "The tailed father and children who inherit the appendage are undoubtedly throwbacks. It is intermittent heredity. It is also harking back to a more or less remote ancestor, due to the reassertion or reawakening of ancestral contributions which have lain for several generations latent or unexpressed."

WONDERFUL ANIMAL IS THE SEA CRAB

The sea crab is a wonderful animal and could teach man something that would greatly enhance his chivalry, says Robert O'Neal of Tampa, Fla. The females shed their shells during the early spring, which leaves their bodies white and tender and a lure for small fish, at whose mercy they would be in short order, but Mr. Crab attends to all this in true husband style. While his mate is feeding along the shore in shallow water he follows closely and guards every attack with his strong claws. I have watched this performance often with interest from the shore for some distance. The female wanders leisurely along apparently unconcerned, while the male is kept busy grabbing at the numerous fish as they constantly make a rush for a bite. Should he cease his vigilance for a moment his mate would soon be seized and devoured. When the male crab eats or sleeps is a mystery.

Lesson for August 28

NATHAN LEADS DAVID TO REPENTANCE

LESSON TEXT—II Sam. 11:1, 12:23.
GOLDEN TEXT—A broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Shows David
His Sin.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Nathan Calls David
to Repentance.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—Confessing and Forsaking Sin.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—Repentance: What It Is, and What
It Does.

I. David's Crimes (II Sam. 11).

1. Adultery (vv. 1-5).

He by his kingly authority brought Bathsheba, the beautiful wife of Uriah, one of his brave soldiers, into his harem.

2. Murder (vv. 14-18).

David sought to cover up his shameful act of adultery with Bathsheba by calling Uriah from the field of battle
and giving him a furlough at home
with his wife. (He first gave him honorable recognition by sending a portion of meat from the royal table—
v. 8.) Uriah's high sense of military duty and propriety would not allow him to do this.

Falling in this, David corrupted himself by making him drunk, with the expectation that Uriah would thus go home. When these schemes would not work he resorted to the terrible crime of exposing Uriah to the most dangerous place in the battle where he would surely be killed.

II. Contributing Factors in David's Fall.

1. Idleness (11:1).

It was the king's responsibility to go forth with his army to battle.
David tarried at Jerusalem because of indolence or self-indulgence.

2. He looked upon a beautiful woman
an (11:2).

As he was lounging in idleness, this temptation was too great for him. He yielded to his lustful impulse and sent his servants to bring the woman to him. This action on the part of David is absolutely inexcusable. David had the power to turn from this sin and thus escape temptation.

III. David Rebuked by Nathan, the Prophet (12:1-12).

What David had done displeased
the Lord (11:27). What he had done gratified his own carnal lust, but the serious thing is that it displeased the Lord. Because David was God's own God could not let the matter rest. He therefore sent Nathan, His prophet to him.

1. The parable of the ewe lamb
(vv. 1-6).

Among the Jews it was customary to have pet lambs which were brought up with the children of the family
and therefore regarded with tender affection. Nathan pictures before David a poor man whose sole possession consisted of one such lamb, and a rich neighbor when entertaining a guest had appropriated unto himself
this lamb instead of drawing upon his numerous flock. This so aroused David's anger that he declared that the rich man should restore fourfold,
and in addition forfeit his life. Nathan declared: "Thou art the man."
In spite of David's awful sin, he had burning indignation against the wrong
doer.

2. Sentence of judgment (vv. 7-12).

Perhaps no history records an indictment so terrible as this one.

(1) He recounted unto David God's peculiar favor (vv. 7, 8).

God had taken him from the sheep-
cote and lifted him to the throne.
made him king over all Israel. He had delivered him from Saul's murderous plots and he had inherited Saul's royal possessions.

(2) David's shameful treatment of God's law (v. 9).

He pointed out that he had violated
both tables of the law by worshiping
the God of passion and had practiced covetousness, robbery, lying and murder.

(3) The awful judgment pronounced
(vv. 10-12).

The prophet declared that the sword
should never depart from David's house. He had used the sword to slay Uriah. God in His retributive justice permitted the sword to remain in David's house.

IV. David's Confession (vv. 13-23)

The confession of sin was so real to David that he declared that it had been committed against God (Ps. 51:4).
He now was made fully conscious of his broken condition. He realized
what it meant to be without innocence. Though he confessed his sin, as recorded in Psalm 32, and God forgave him, he had to suffer its consequence. "Whatsoever a man soweth
that shall he also reap."

The Coward

To die in order to avoid the pains
of poverty, love, or anything that is disagreeable is not the role of a brave man, but of a coward. For it is cowardice to shun the misfortunes and trials of life, not undergoing death because it is honorable, but to escape
evil.—Aristotle.

Prayer is a golden key which should open the morning and lock up the evening.—Bishop Hopkins.

CHESAPEAKE & HOCKING

Railway Threatened With Damage Suit In Ross County on Account of a Grade
Crossing.

Indications are that some action
will be taken in Ross County
against The Chesapeake & Hocking to force the railroad to obey
the state law on a newly constructed railroad operating trains
on a grade crossing. The C. & H. became guilty of its first flagrant violation of this law, in the opinion of some county officials,
when it operated a test train of 35 cars of coal and two private cars over the new line Tuesday.

The test train started out of Russell, Kentucky, at 6 a. m. At 8 a. m. the train was at Robbins,
Pike county, just below Gregg,
and ready to start moving over the Chesapeake & Hocking 63-
mile line from Gregg to Valley
Crossing near Columbus.

When the train passed over the grade crossing at the Kingston-Adelphi pike, known as the county line road, the Chesapeake & Hocking became guilty of an offense against the grade crossing laws of the state of Ohio, it is held. The law states that all newly constructed railroad crossings at highways must be either above or below grade. The one at the Umsted farm, Kingston-Adelphi pike, is on the grade.
The Chesapeake & Hocking, the "dummy" corporation organized
to build the Gregg-Valley Crossing branch, has instituted condemnation proceedings against Edward Umsted to appropriate land to build an over-pass for the highway. However, Umsted's land was condemned once
for railroad purposes, but the C.
& H. failed to secure enough. A doubt has been expressed as to whether condemnation proceedings against Umsted can be brought a second time.

The board of county commissioners could condemn the needed land, but the C. & H. failed to make an agreement with the commissioners to handle condemnations where more land was needed.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

Wonder if the big corporation
will have any trouble in regard to the Duvall, Pickaway County,
grade-crossing?

(Copyright.)

WHY his parents had named him
Clarence it would be hard to say.
But his middle name was William and
when, after a careful preparation by
a tutor at home, he was sent to school
at the age of fourteen and the boys
learning that his name was Clarence
began to jolly him he, by a happy inspiration, insisted that his name being also William he should be called Bill. After "punching the heads" of several youths who failed to comply
with this demand, Bill he became
she had been christened Beatrice
which easily glided into Bee.From an early stage of the game
they were accustomed to discuss their
respective futures with each other—
from the days when Bill was undecided whether he would be a police-
man or an engine driver; and Bee
hovered between becoming a missionary or an equestrienne, like the young
lady she had seen jump through a
hoop from a horse's back.And now they were children no
longer; they were grown up and of marriageable age. Bill's bright and boyish dreams of driving an engine
or carrying a policeman's nightstick
had been laid away in the cedar and
lavender of the locked trunk we all
keep for our youthful ambitions.
Bee's visions of palm-clothed cannibal
islands and sawdust glories were no
more. Bill had just been admitted to the bar and Bee was just out of Vas-
sar. The idea of matrimony had,
somehow, got into their heads as a part of the future, and they discussed
it in that calm and abstract way
which became two college graduates.They talked very learnedly of marriage "as an institution"; not by any means agreeing upon all points of
theory but united upon one point in
practice: which was that each of
them should marry for money—for each of them needed it. The little
that Bill's father had left him had
been mostly expended upon his education; Bee's parents lived in style,
but the style was kept up by an an-
nuity which ceased at her mother's
death."With your beauty and your intelligence, Bee," said Bill when they
were having one of their conferences
on the subject, "you ought to be able
to marry a great fortune. With me
the case is not so simple. Heiresses
are not, as a rule, given to marrying
briefless young lawyers, and if they
did have that habit I should be very careful in making a choice; the woman I marry must have attractions for
me outside of her money. I will never marry a woman for her money
alone, but the woman I marry must
have money."B stands for beautiful and Bee was beautiful. Launched in society she
had plenty of admirers, and there
were several young men who plainly
indicated that they would like to become something more to her—if they had a little encouragement. True to
her plan Bee saved most of her smiles
for those admirers who were possessed of wealth. Among them was a certain George Tallcott whom she preferred above all others. She found herself thinking about him continual-
ly. Here was just the man she and
Bill had imagined for her husband.
But now that the plan so carefully
elaborated was evidently about to
come to a successful conclusion a
strange nervousness and feeling of
doubt took possession of her. All at once the plan appeared to her detestable. George proposed—and was rejected.Bee slept but little that night, and
the next day went down to Bill's law
office to tell him all about it. "You
know that wonderful plan of ours,
Bill," said she."Ye-es," replied Bill with a rather sheepish look. "I was coming to see
you about that. I have got something to tell you. It was a great plan—but I am afraid it won't work. You and I have been like bother and sister
ever since we were little children. We have always planned our futures and confided our plans to each other. You
remember how once you planned to
be a bareback rider in the circus and
I to be a policeman? Those plans
somehow went fluey—and I guess our
great joint matrimonial plan has gone
the same way.""I guess it has," sighed Bee.
Bill looked at her in a puzzled manner. "Then you have heard?" asked
him."Heard what?" exclaimed Bee.
"That I am going to marry Amy
Adwell," said Bill."Amy Adwell?" cried Bee. "Why,
he has no money.""Not a cent," replied Bill; "but I'm going to marry her. You see, I love
her.""Oh, you are all right," sighed Bee,
but I am afraid I am in love with George Tallcott—and I can't marry him because he has money. It would be too much like carrying out our destable old plan.""Nonsense," said Bill; "forget his money and forget our infernal plan.
We made the plan together and you
see I have thrown it to the winds.
Forget it. George is sure to ask you
again and you say 'yes' this time.
You love him, marry him."It took but a little encouragement
to induce George to propose, again
and this time he was accepted. But Bee first told him all about the wonderful plan she and Bill had made—
and George laughed at it.HopeHope is all that makes life interest-

Old Time Hard Luck

"Alas!" sighed Alexander, "the world conquered and not a chance to get into the movies."—San Francisco Chronicle.

THE NADIR OF DEMOCRACY.

An engaging question is asked by that organ of stalwart Republicanism of the Calvin Coolidge type, the Ohio State Journal, of Columbus. It queries, "What of the Democrats?" Well, what of them? The State Journal thinks that the withdrawal of the president has improved the chances of the Democrats, but observes that they do not seem to be eager to take advantage of the situation. The assertion is made that the party might have an outside chance to win with Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, but would be doing little more than going thru the motions with any other man.

Opinions of many observers is likely to coincide with the editor. Yet Governor Smith may not be nominated and that largely because a considerable portion of his party has forgotten the older Democratic ideals and ideas. His nomination, even if it were made, is more than likely to lead to defeat as complete as that of previous candidates for another reason.

The Democratic party today is threatened with the fate that has overtaken other liberal parties in other countries. It is not radical enough for the truly radical folks and too radical for others. It bids fair to be caught between the upper and the nether millstones. It is not without significance that the party of Lloyd George has all but disappeared in England, but has given way to a Labor party, waving radical standards.

The traditional Democratic line of talk today is a political embarrassment. Democracy flew the banner of opposition to sumptuary legislation. Many people accept such legislation without apparent protest and then in practice proceed to break the laws with impunity. Your man fond of wine and beer today does not bother to waste time in political action or agitation; he brews his beer or gathers elder berries, grapes of blackberries and waits for nature to do the rest. This may be regrettable, but it is true. Many Democrats shrink from naming Mr. Smith for fear of losing the "sunbonnet" vote, as a wag has called it. Yet, without that liberal force the Democracy has little to offer.

Again, the party has spoken of its love for the "common people." But who wants to be a common person today? Even in business this slant toward the refinements of life is manifest. A great motor car manufacturer may be facing trouble today because his product, once amazingly popular, may have lost some hold upon the people. Thus, when the party attempts to tell the crowd that it represents them, the crowd says that it needs no shepherd, guardian or wet nurse.

Our brother in Columbus, we fear, asks a vain question. Fortune's wheel is at a low turn for the party of Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson. Perhaps its traditions, its strivings, its heart and its soul are needed badly in America today. But this does not help it in an immediate and practical sense. And that is the only thing which appeals to the bread-and-butter politicians. — Cincinnati Enquirer.

Panama "Home of Orchid"

The designation, "Home of the Orchid," has been applied to Panama because of the great varieties of orchids found there. It has been explained that this is due to the fact that, though Panama is small, it has a great variation of climate, ranging from the humid lowlands of the jungle to the mountains of Chiriqui, which attain an altitude of more than 5,000 feet. From the earliest times Panama has been a fruitful field for the orchid collector, and the first professional collector of which there is a record was Luis Née, a French botanist, who visited Panama in 1784 and in 1789.

AMUSEMENTS

"The part of 'Monica' in 'The Understanding Heart,' will make Joan Crawford one of the foremost leading women in pictures."

This is the statement of Jack Conway, who directed this Cosmopolitan production now playing at the Met theater, and when it is remembered that Conway made a like observation concerning William Haines when that player was making "Brown of Harvard," it bears more than an ordinary amount of weight, for every prediction made by Conway for the young actor has since been fulfilled.

"Miss Crawford has all the qualities necessary for screen success," declares Conway, "and more, for she has a definite, electric personality that she manages to project on the screen without any apparent effort. 'As 'Monica,' I believe she gives a performance that will be numbered among the best ten of the year. She plays the role with intelligence, has never looked so beautiful and gives the part an innate refinement that is unusual in a girl so young. With each succeeding picture her face is becoming more plastic, and she has completely overcome the self-consciousness that at first handicapped her."

Francis X. Bushman J., plays opposite Miss Crawford as "Tony" the young forest ranger. The cast also includes Carmel Myers, Rockliffe Fellowes, Jerry Miley, Richard Carle and Harvey Clark. Edward T. Lowe adapted the story to the screen from the famous novel of the same name by Peter B. Kyne. It is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture.

Chic Three-Piece Suit Is of Black, White, Red

Intricate but simple is this black, white and red three-piece suit designed for Dorothy Mackaill, the motion picture star. The skirt is of black and white-striped flat crepe. It has a wide black and red band at the hemline. The overblouse is of white satin. The jacket is of black flat crepe. The coat is edged around with two lines of white braid; two buttons draw it tight over the hips.

Ideas for Sports Wear Found on Golf Links

The increasing interest accorded golf by Frenchwomen is naturally responsible for increasingly attractive clothes for the occasion, and a visit to any of the golf clubs in the environs of Paris offers many ideas for sports wear. One's first impression is that Frenchwomen refuse to accede entirely to the utilitarian garments considered good form in England; and although the smartest women choose jersey and tweed for cool weather, even these are brightened by gay scarfs and hats, while for summer, silk crepes and linens compete with woolsens.

A French golf course is decidedly colorful. The two-piece garment is the rule and, all spring, jumpers, skirts and cardigans made a popular combination. With the advent of summer, the cardigan was discarded, and the jumper, as well as the skirt, are often of the lighter fabrics.

Some players do not mind sunburn, and the sleeveless sweater or short-sleeved dress is sometimes seen. Most do, however, so that not only are long sleeves the rule, but the scarfs are important, unless the jumper or blouse be collared close to the neck. Hats are generally regulation sports shapes of felt.

Three-Piece Costume Is Choice of Many Women

The three-piece costume plays an increasingly important part in the current mode. It is now the undisputed choice of well-dressed women for practically every daytime occasion, so smart has the frock with its related coat proven.

In the evening, also, the ensemble motif is paramount, formal gowns, as well as the simpler type of chiffon dress, being accompanied by either matching wraps, or coats allied to frock underneath by some detail of trimming.

The vogue of the ensemble is due primarily to the trim appearance presented by a costume consisting of dress and coat designed expressly to complement each other. A matching outfit, or at least one with related details on the frock and wrap, is a far more pleasing creation than when the outer garment bears no relation to the gown underneath.

Kerchiefs Are Square Because Shape Is Liked

Handkerchiefs are square, and not oblong or round, because in 1784 Louis XVI, king of France, solemnly issued an edict from the palace of Versailles that only square handkerchiefs might be manufactured in the kingdom. Until then handkerchiefs had been long scarflike affairs.

But Louis XVI's laws being considerably out of date, modern handkerchiefs continue to be square not because the law demands it, but because customers prefer them that way since they fit into the pocket more easily than oblong ones.

New Sleeves

The "half-way" is the latest sleeve, which would be the elbow-length sleeve except for its unusual cuts, which may be flared, circular, puffed or tight with some odd cuff treatment.

WALKER TO BERLIN

New York Mayor's Arrival There Under Unhappy Auspices.

Berlin, Aug. 23.—(U.P.)—Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, will arrive here tomorrow under unhappy auspices.

While the radical press continued today to warn Walker that he is unwelcome because of the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, the Republican municipality of Berlin declined the American Club's invitation to be present at the Walker dinner at the Hotel Kaiserhof.

The municipal officials explained that they would not enter the hotel because the management refused on Aug. 11, German constitution day, to hoist the Republican flag.

HELIUM GAS FIRST DISCOVERED ON SUN

The discovery of helium gas on the sun preceded its discovery in commercial quantities on the earth by about 50 years. Lockyer in 1868 found a new gas in the spectrum of the sun while studying the flames shooting out from its surface. The gas was new because the color of the line representing it, when analyzed by the spectroscope, was distinctly different from anything previously known. Twenty-eight years later traces of the same gas were found in uraninite, and for the first time scientists knew that it was present on earth as well as in the sun. More years passed and it was discovered that helium was a product also of the disintegration of radium, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Still later, during the World war, Kansas housewives began to complain that the natural gas supplied for cooking was deficient both in heat and light. A university professor was sent to investigate and found in his samples that helium, a noninflammable, inert gas, was to blame. Its extraction in paying quantities from Texas gas wells followed.

Car No. 2—10,000 miles 63.302 M. P. H.—less than 9,479 minutes

—then car No. 2 after running 10,000 miles made:

Car No. 2— 1,000 miles 72.512 M. P. H.—less than 828 minutes

Car No. 1—15,000 miles 61.377 M. P. H.—less than 14,664 minutes

Car No. 3—15,000 miles 62.709 M. P. H.—less than 14,353 minutes

Sedan

Three Auburn 8-88 Stock Cars Ran Total of:

42,000 miles in less than 14,664 minutes

Daring and unprecedented. Far in excess of any test ever imposed on stock cars. Not done behind pad locks and timed by factory employees, but publicly, under American Automobile Association sanction and supervision.

We decided to go to extremes never before undertaken by any manufacturer in order to completely, conclusively, and overwhelmingly prove Auburn is a faster, more efficient and more durable stock car.

Through blinding fogs; through down pours of rain, under the hottest sun in years; 28 thousand times around the 1½ mile track on slippery boards; never have men and machines endured such abnormal strains!

Nine drivers, working relays days and night, could not over tax the endurance and speed of the Auburn cars. Old records completely smashed from 5 to 5,000 miles for fully equipped stock cars. New records at every revolution of the wheels from 5,000 to 15,000 miles. The speed was phenomenal . . . 34 new stock car records . . .

But What Of It?

We knew all along that Auburn cars are that fast. But, it is not Auburn's proven speed superiority that is most significant . . . frankly, that was easy and incidental. What IS important is the fine character of car necessary for all three cars to survive such speed.

How's This For Proof?

After one of the roadsters had run the unequalled distance of ten thousand gruelling miles, in less than 9,479 minutes at an average speed of over 63 miles per hour, it was taken off the track, thoroughly checked—necessary replacements made—tuned and greased.

Then, for 1,000 miles more, this same car spurred forward at over 72 miles per hour. That proves reserve power, speed and endurance unknown in motor cars until now.

Another Thriller

After 2,637 miles, the Sedan running at about

70 miles an hour speed, turned over on the wet track, during a rainstorm in the middle of the night, slid on its top with all four wheels in the air, for about 50 feet, righted itself and then crashed into the railing. Two doors and three fenders were torn off, radiator and windshield smashed. Seven hours were spent for photographs, radiator and other body repairs and the car went back on the track. It caught up with the other cars, and finished the 15,000 miles at over 62 miles per hour speed. That proves the strong construction, and endurance of Auburn cars, although because in the accident, it lost three fenders and two doors, its entire distance cannot be counted as an official A. A. A. record, but it was officially timed by the A. A. A.

Triple Proof

It would have been perfectly startling if one car had broken all these records, but three Auburn cars were in this test—and all three of them did honor to the name of Auburn.

"WOODPECKERS" AID UNCLE SAM IN ECONOMY PLANS

Save the Government Several Million Dollars Yearly by Thrift and Efficiency.

Washington.—"The Loyal Order of Woodpeckers"—Uncle Sam's economy fraternity—has saved the government several million dollars in the last year by thrift and efficiency.

Under the guiding eye of the budget and efficiency bureaus, federal employees have saved supplies, utilized equipment to the utmost, and labored with as little lost motion as possible.

Sale of surplus government supplies brought in hundreds of thousands of dollars, it was stated at the treasury. Much of these materials had been rotting or rusting away from nonuse.

Then the government gained quite a profit through telephone coin boxes in departmental buildings. By a working agreement with the telephone company, the treasury collected a portion of the receipts from coin slots while federal phones could not be used for personal calls.

Many departments economized by personal cuts. In many instances high salaried employees who resigned were replaced by employees at much lower salaries.

Running the government costs $4,000,000,000 annually and because of this huge outlay no economies, no matter how small, could be overlooked. Rubber bands were used over and over, until Postmaster General New exclaiming he could get some of his around a bass drum.

The Agricultural department even used its pay envelopes over again. Employees when paid returned the envelopes, thus saving the container and also the labor of typing the name of the receiver on each envelope once more.

At the Commerce department paper clips were used until they were "worn thin," chain envelopes were used for interdepartmental communications, pencils sharpened to their erasers and paper written on both sides for economy.

The Navy and War departments used their communication facilities to send commercial messages and also practically all the government's business, collecting funds for the treasury and at the same time saving other governmental agencies money on transmitting communications.

The Woodpeckers were inaugurated by General Lord, director of the budget, to "peck away" continuously at unnecessary expenses.

Vacationist Remembers Cat; Calls Out Cops

Chicago.—It was a quiet evening in the Oak Park police station when a breathless messenger boy arrived with a telegram from Robert Regan, 533 South Wenonah avenue, Oak Park, who is in Eagle River, Wis., for his vacation.

"I forgot about my cat when I went away," read the telegram. "He's been alone without food in the house for three days. Please rescue him."

Sergt. William Koerber raced to the Winona avenue address. He pried open a window. A large cat leaped out on him, scratched his face and fled. A squad was called and searched the neighborhood. The cat finally was found under a hedge. It distributed more scratches before it was caught.

A second telegram arrived at the station. "Please take care of Thomas until I return," it read. "He is a good cat and deserves the best of care."

Four scratched Oak Park policemen sent a reply. But the telegraph company wouldn't transmit it.

Man Eats but Fraction of Total Food Supply

Yonkers, N. Y.—Burning 8,900,000,000 tons of coal, 8,900 times as much as the world produces in a year, will release about as much energy as contained in the sunlight captured annually through the production of plant foods. Of this huge total, the human race uses less than two-tenths of 1 per cent, according to an estimate by Dr. John M. Arthur of the Boyce Institute for Plant Research here.

Every day each one of the 1,750,000,000 human beings on the earth consumes about 2,000 calories of food. Even meat comes indirectly from plants. The human race is therefore dependent on photosynthesis, the process by which the plant uses sunlight to form food. The total consumption of food during a year by man amounts to about 1,200,000,000,000 calories. All of the other animal life, vertebrate or invertebrate, large or microscopic, on the globe is estimated to consume about six times this amount.

This Man Served on Jury Every Year Since 1908

Memphis, Tenn.—When it comes to serving on the jury, Lawrence W. Akers, a Memphis man, can tell all about it. He served on some kind of a jury every year since 1908.

Even though the duties of citizenship at times threaten to break up his home, ruin his business, and always gives him a vacation that he doesn't want, Akers has had little luck in getting out of jury service. When called as a venireman the first few times he acted with good grace, for he thought he was performing a civic duty. But with civic duty calling year after year, Akers got tired.

But the judges laugh at his excuses and ask for reasons. Akers stays on the job.

PREHISTORIC MONSTER LIVES

Recent expeditions into the swampy, almost impenetrable fastnesses of southern Japan have brought back photographs giving the first authoritative evidence that a monster differing little from those of prehistoric times still survives in the moist jungle. It is a one-horned, rhinoceroslike creature, its hairless hide covered with small horny scales, says Dr. P. Vageler, German Zoologist, in Popular Mechanics. Enormous front teeth resembling those of a hippopotamus. Natives call it the "tanggiling."

Watermelon a Vegetable

The Department of Agriculture says that while the watermelon is botanically regarded as a fruit, the horticultural and legal aspects of the case classify it as a vegetable, so that it would be known as a vegetable. It is grown as a vegetable and marketed as a vegetable, and the court decisions have been that it shall be considered a vegetable.

Instead of making a fool of a man a woman furnishes the opportunity—and lets him do the rest.

The photograph shows Mr. Butchers, owner of the new motorcycle trailer, camping on the Isle of Man beside his novel outfit. This is a good idea and will be readily taken up by out-of-doors lovers of this country.

PREPARING FOR TOURING TRIPS

Sleeping Shelter is One of Most Important Items to Be Considered.

Never, since the covered-wagon days when our forefathers threaded the trackless wilderness, has any traveler been so much in need of self-reliance as the modern automobile tourist and camper. "Be prepared" should therefore be the motto of every motorist who intends to get fullest enjoyment from his touring trips.

Question of Shelter.

Assuming that the tourist has provided himself with enough suitable clothing, food, bedding and cooking equipment, his next thought is likely to be about a sleeping shelter. It will be found that the outside tent arrangement, consisting of a tent erected on one side of the car so that the car may be used as a dressing room, is satisfactory for all-around conditions. More elaborate equipment, such as sleeping trailers, can, of course, be purchased.

In buying a tent it is best to get one of balloon silk because of the small space this material occupies when it is folded. See that there is provision for keeping out flies and insects, and that there is a good floor. If you are not sure that your tent is waterproof, coat it with some waterproofing agent.

Watch Water Supply.

Take proper care of foodstuffs, and remember, too, that the water you carry must be used not only for drinking and cooking, but also for the cooling system of your car. Special water bags which hold an adequate supply can be obtained.

Last of all, don't weigh down your car with camping articles of unnecessary bulk. Cots, stoves, etc., should be of the most compact type, so that they can be fitted readily into the space your car provides.

Clock Acts as Traffic Cop in Kansas Capital

The alarm clock, faithful servant of the American home, now is being employed as a warning that the business man's automobile has been parked long enough and that it's time to move on.

With a two-hour parking limit in the business section of Topeka, several houses have installed alarm clocks in the offices. At the end of the two hours the alarm rings. A man gets up, hurries out and moves all the automobiles belonging to employees of the company.

The alarm is set up two hours and the performance repeated. So it goes throughout the day. Business houses are using the idea and claim it works to perfection. More and more establishments are reported taking up the move.

Clutch on New Car Apt to Grab More Abruptly

The clutch on a new car is likely to work a little more abruptly than one on a car that has been broken in. The plates on the new clutch take hold so gently during the first stage of clutching that the driver imagines they are not taking hold at all. He may then let the pedal back through its final engagement much too suddenly. When the clutch is older its plates grab a little more. The driver notices the engagement of the clutch taking effect sooner and thus is more careful during the final release of the pedal.

Five Automobile Brakes—Most Careful Attention

It will pay motorists to test their brakes every day after taking the car out of the garage. It isn't being over-cautious to apply them within the first block, whether it is necessary or not, just to determine that nothing has gone wrong since the car was last used. It may mean the difference between life and death some day, and the test thus may be regarded as a ramification of the definition of nature's first law of self-preservation.

Striking Color Names

An attempt is being made not only to make the new automobile colors look attractive but to sound attractive as well. The names of some of the colors seen on the cars at the recent automobile shows are: Pyramid and oriole red, cool brown, thrush brown, bluejay blue, mallard green, sea fog gray, channel green, shoal water blue, ocean blue, marine blue, Itallo Hood green, Peter Pan blue, fleur-de-lis red, Buckingham gray, Egyptian red, Haig green, Italian cream, bronville blue, midday black, maize, fawn, pistachio green, down mist, Pagan blue, bakam blue, burning bush orange and Ambato green.

Radiator Whistle Gives Warning to the Driver

Your motor always seems to over-heat and start boiling the water. You have the misfortune to have it happen at all, at night when you can't see the thermometer on the radiator, or when, in the daytime, your attention is concentrated on the road or the scenery.

Of course, if you are going slowly in traffic the escaping steam will warn you of trouble, but when you are traveling fast, you may not notice that something is wrong until serious damage has been done. A good way to make an infallible steam indicator is to solder a small whistle to the end of the overflow pipe, as shown in the illustration. Day or night the sharp blast of the whistle blown by the escaping steam will warn you to stop and investigate. A warning signal of this type is particularly valuable if your car is fitted with an automatic hand-controlled radiator shutter. When the hand-controlled type, the whistle will blow and warn you to open the shutter if you happen to forget it. Popular Science Monthly.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

Lindbergh was lucky not to have a back seat driver.

Also, how does the weak knee you're not carrying a spare?

A reckless motorist always tries to pass every thing, including the back seat.

Another great need is an automobile that cannot be driven from the back seat.

The modern idea of roughing it is to drive with one window open in a closed car.

However, the quest for plenty of parking space is what built up many a mighty empire.

One of every five persons in the United States owns an automobile according to a recent estimate.

Cars that claim 90 or more miles an hour could well be advertised: "Will last the owner his lifetime."

Some people take poison, others drown themselves, and still others try to pass another automobile on a blind curve.

The news that there is only one automobile for every three thousand residents of India is mighty good publicity for India.

E. C. TURNER LOOKS LIKE A CANDIDATE

Attorney General May Seek Governor's Office and There are Others

Two political announcements of importance are expected to be made within a short time.

Both of these will have a bearing on the contest for gubernatorial nominations next year.

One is the declaration by Attorney General Edward C. Turner, that he will ask for the nomination on the Republican ticket. Turner has been on the verge of making his announcement for some time and the numerous speeches he has recently made have indicated he was preparing to enter the race. He will undoubtedly have a large following and he has waited before making a definite statement to learn how his candidacy would be received. The assurance of support have been sufficiently numerous and of such a character as to give him belief he can secure the support of a majority of the Republican voters at the primaries in August, 1928.

He will have several candidates in opposition and the contest promises to be exciting and filled with the attendant features, which have marked campaigns on the Republican side for the past three campaigns.

Congressman James Begg, of the 13th district, has already practically declared himself a candidate. In addition it is expected, Colonel Carmi Thompson, of Cleveland; Congressman John G. Cooper, of the 19th district; Myers Y. Cooper, of Cincinnati, defeated in the election of last year; former Secretary of State Thad Brown, who was a leading figure in the last primary; Auditor of State Joseph Tracy and several others will all seek the nomination. The field will not be lacking for material.

The other announcement is from Congressman Martin L. Davey, of Kent, national representative from the 13th district. He will seek the nomination on the Democratic ticket. It is probable he will have no opposition, the Democratic leaders having seemingly agreed that he is the strongest man who can be chosen. Governor Donahey has announced repeatedly he will not be a candidate again but will seek the nomination for United States senator if he decides to continue in the political field. While the primaries and election are more than a year away the situation is much discussed and is the chief topic of interest at the state capitol, even going beyond speculation as to the nominee for presidency.

INFURIATED BAND HURLS STONES AND ROTTEN EGGS

Deputy Sheriff Was Seriously Bitten—"Amazon" Puts Up Fierce Battle and It Took Three Men To Take Her To Jail—Rioters Dispersed By Officers and Three Women Arrested—Suits For Injuries Allege County Commissioners Did Not Give Adequate Protection—No Money In Athens County To Pay Deputies.

Between 50 and 75 women took up the union fight against opening of coal mines on a non-union basis at Martins Ferry, Thursday, and attacked a group of 15 non-union workers on their way to the Florence mine under guard of Sheriff Clyde C. Hardesty and eight deputies.

The women surrounded the group of 23 men, pelted them with eggs and stones, fought a hand-to-hand scuffle with them, and bit and scratched.

Three of the women, Josephine Holewick, Catharin Niska and Margaret Luposki are in jail as a result of the attack, and the men are suffering minor injuries. A deputy sheriff was bitten seriously.

The rest of the mob fled when Hardesty and the deputies charged with cudgels.

When Sheriff Hardesty attempted to usher a 250 pound woman assailant into an automobile, she turned on him and started a struggle. Two deputies came to Hardesty's assistance and between them they were able to take her to the jail. Several more arrests are expected.

After the mob had been dispersed the 15 non-union men were taken to the Florence mine, where they began the work of putting the newly erected bunk houses in order for the expected influx of non-union men when an attempt is made to open the mine.

At the Provident mine, St. Clairsville, 20 men went to work cleaning away the underbrush which has sprung up since the mine became idle several months ago and pumping water out of the shaft. This is another mine which is to be opened shortly.

Following filing of suit against the county commissioners by Emory E. Brewer, non-union miner, for injuries

incurred when he was attacked August 2, by union sympathizers, at least 10 other suits are expected to be filed. Brewer charges the commissioners with failure to give adequate protection. He seeks $1,000.

Because many of the deputies named by Sheriff William Williams to guard the Lick Run and Lurig mines were "worth nothing" in the opinion of bankers, Athens county commissioners have been unable to borrow money to pay the deputies.

Eighteen of the 32 deputies have been dropped because of lack of funds to pay and commissioners say it may be necessary to drop others unless arrangements are made speedily to obtain money.

According to the commissioners, the bankers who have been approached for loans contend that most of the deputies are union coal miners and therefore their sympathy would be with the union miners and consequently worth less for protection of property should a crisis arise in which violence was threatened.

REPUBLICAN LINE FORMS PRESIDENCY

Hoover and Dawes are Seen as the Leading Possibilities at This Time.

The lists are now open and volunteers for the presidency are forming in line. Some of the faithful in whose breasts the spark of hope had well nigh flickered out are now in full flame and frenzy. The old war horses of the party, just a little touched in the wind and not quite sound as to legs, have sniffed the battle from afar and are now prancing and sashaying around with their tails over the dashboard. Senator Fess is moaning quietly as he eyes the empty White House; Senator Willis known as the "loud speaker" is experimenting with a new form of throat lozenge; Speaker Longworth, also of Ohio, is as busy as a bird dog being genial and democratic and popular; Senator Watson, of Indiana is engaged in forgetting the Klan; and so it goes.

The Republican party is rich in men of presidential caliber: Secretary Hoover, Vice President Dawes, Mr. Lowden, Secretary Mellon and ex-Secretary Hughes are obviously men whose characters and accomplishments would grace the office. Of these, several are probably unavailable. Mr. Mellon is a shade too old. Mr. Hughes has the handicap of a previous defeat, Mr. Lowden is a sectional rather than a national candidate and is also handicapped by age. Mr. Hoover and Mr. Dawes remain, and either one of them would make a great president. Both are men of well-rounded experience in great affairs; both are versatile, courageous and highly intelligent. They are conservative because they have studied the past, but they are bold in upholding change which their experience approves.

It remains to be seen whether the Republican party will recognize and support such men or whether, as in 1920, the leaders will turn to a safe "regular" nonentity who can be relied upon to keep the country safe for Republicans. In the former case the party will serve the interests of the whole country; in the latter it will serve its own selfish and temporary expediences. Either Mr. Hoover or Mr. Dawes could defeat any Democrat, Al Smith not excepted, and the election of either would insure a sound, constructive administration as well as a firm and honorable policy at home and abroad.—The Independent.

Tuberculosis Spreads to Millions in Russia

Leningrad.—Malaria, tuberculosis and trachoma are ravishing Soviet Russia. It is stated by Dr. W. Horsley Gantt, a young physician of Charlottesville, Pa., who has just completed a two-volume work on health and sanitary conditions in Russia. Doctor Gantt says there are more than 4,000,000 cases of malaria within the Soviet union, which is four times the number before the war. The number of persons affected with tuberculosis runs into the millions, and the disease is steadily increasing. More than half a million Russians are suffering from trachoma, Doctor Gantt finds, while in the United States there are only 1,000 cases.

WONDERFUL ANIMAL IS THE SEA CRAB

The sea crab is a wonderful animal and could teach man something that would greatly enhance his chivalry, says Robert O'Neal of Tampa, Fla. The females shed their shells during the early spring, which leaves their bodies white and tender and a lure for small fish, at whose mercy they would be in short order, but Mr. Crab attends to all this in true husband style. While his mate is feeding along the shore in shallow water he follows closely and guards every attack with his strong claws. I have watched this performance often with interest from the shore for some distance. The female wanders leisurely along apparently unconcerned, while the male is kept busy grabbing at the numerous fish as they constantly make a rush for a bite. Should he cease his vigilance for a moment his mate would soon be seized and devoured. When the male crab eats or sleeps is a mystery.

NATHAN LEADS DAVID TO REPENTANCE

LESSON TEXT--II Sam. 11:1-12:23.
GOLDEN TEXT--A broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.
PRIMARY TOPIC--God Shows David His Sin.
JUNIOR TOPIC--Nathan Calls David to Repentance.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC--Confessing and Forsaking Sin.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC--Repentance: What It Is, and What It Does.

I. David's Crimes (II Sam. 11).
1. Adultery (vv. 4, 5).
He by his kingly authority brought Bathsheba, the beautiful wife of Uriah, one of his brave soldiers, into his harem.
2. Murder (vv. 14-18).
David sought to cover up his shameful act of adultery with Bathsheba by calling Uriah from the field of battle and giving him a furlough at home with his wife. (He first gave him honorable recognition by sending a portion of meat from the royal table--v. 8.) Uriah's high sense of military duty and propriety would not allow him to do this.

Failing in this, David corrupted him by making him drunk, with the expectation that Uriah would thus go home. When these schemes would not work he resorted to the terrible crime of exposing Uriah to the most dangerous place in the battle where he would surely be killed.

II. Contributing Factors in David's Fall.
1. Idleness (11:1).
It was the king's responsibility to go forth with his army to battle. David tarried at Jerusalem because of indolence or self-indulgence.

2. He looked upon a beautiful woman (11:2).
As he was lounging in idleness, this temptation was too great for him. He yielded to his lustful impulse and sent his servants to bring the woman to him. This action on the part of David is absolutely inexcusable. David had the power to turn from this sin and thus escape temptation.

III. David Rebuked by Nathan, the Prophet (12:1-12).
What David had done displeased the Lord (11:27). What he had done gratified his own carnal lust, but the serious thing is that it displeased the Lord. Because David was God's own, God could not let the matter rest. He therefore sent Nathan. His prophet to him.

1. The parable of the ewe lamb (vv. 1-6).
Among the Jews it was customary to have pet lambs which were brought up with the children of the family and therefore regarded with tender affection. Nathan pictures before David a poor man whose sole possession consisted of one such lamb, and a rich neighbor when entertaining a guest had appropriated unto himself this lamb instead of drawing upon his numerous flock. This so aroused David's anger that he declared that the rich man should restore fourfold, and in addition forfeit his life. Nathan declared: "Thou art the man." In spite of David's awful sin, he had burning indignation against the wrong doer.

2. Sentence of judgment (vv. 7-12).
Perhaps no history records an indictment so terrible as this one.
(1) He recounted unto David God's peculiar favor (vv. 7, 8).
God had taken him from the sheepcote and lifted him to the throne, made him king over all Israel. He had delivered him from Saul's murderous plots and he had inherited Saul's royal possessions.
(2) David's shameful treatment of God's law (v. 9).
He pointed out that he had violated both tables of the law by worshipping the God of passion and had practiced covetousness, robbery, lying and murder.

(3) The awful judgment pronounced (vv. 10-12).
The prophet declared that the sword should never depart from David's house. He had used the sword to slay Uriah. God in His retributive justice permitted the sword to remain in David's house.

IV. David's Confession (vv. 13-23).
The confession of sin was so real to David that he declared that it had been committed against God (Ps. 51:4). He now was made fully conscious of his broken condition. He realized what it meant to be without innocence. Though he confessed his sin, as recorded in Psalm 32, and God forgave him, he had to suffer its consequence. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

The Coward
To die in order to avoid the pains of poverty, love, or anything that is disagreeable is not the role of a brave man, but of a coward. For it is cowardice to shun the misfortunes and trials of life, not undergoing death because it is honorable, but to escape evil.--Aristotle.

Prayer is a golden key which should open the morning and lock up the evening.--Bishop Hopkins.

CHESAPEAKE & HOCKING
Railway Threatened With Damage Suit In Ross County on Account of a Grade Crossing.

Indications are that some action will be taken in Ross County against The Chesapeake & Hocking to force the railroad to obey the state law on a newly constructed railroad operating trains on a grade crossing. The C. & H. became guilty of its first flagrant violation of this law, in the opinion of some county officials, when it operated a test train of 35 cars of coal and two private cars over the new line Tuesday.

The test train started out of Russell, Kentucky, at 6 a. m. At 8 a. m. the train was at Robbins, Pike county, just below Gregg, and ready to start moving over the Chesapeake & Hocking 63-mile line from Gregg to Valley Crossing near Columbus.

When the train passed over the grade crossing at the Kingston-Adelphi pike, known as the county line road, the Chesapeake & Hocking became guilty of an offense against the grade crossing laws of the state of Ohio, it is held. The law states that all newly constructed railroad crossings at highways must be either above or below grade. The one at the Umsted farm, Kingston-Adelphi pike, is on the grade. The Chesapeake & Hocking, the "dummy" corporation organized to build the Gregg-Valley Crossing branch, has instituted condemnation proceedings against Edward Umstead to appropriate land to build an over-pass for the highway. However, Umsted's land was condemned once for railroad purposes, but the C. & H. failed to secure enough. A doubt has been expressed as to whether condemnation proceedings against Umstead can be brought a second time.

The board of county commissioners could condemn the needed land, but the C. & H. failed to make an agreement with the commissioners to handle condemnations where more land was needed.--Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

Wonder if the big corporation will have any trouble in regard to the Duvall, Pickaway County, grade-crossing?

WHY his parents had named him
Clarence it would be hard to say.
But his middle name was William and
when, after a careful preparation by
a tutor at home, he was sent to school
at the age of fourteen and the boys
learning that his name was Clarence
began to jolly him he, by a happy inspiration, insisted that his name being also William he should be called Bill. After "punching the heads" of
several youths who failed to comply
with this demand, Bill he became
She had been christened Beatrice
which easily glided into Bee.From an early stage of the game
they were accustomed to discuss their
respective futures with each other—
from the days when Bill was unde-
cided whether he would be a police-
man or an engine driver; and Bee
hovered between becoming a missionary or an equestrienne, like the young
lady she had seen jump through a
hoop from a horse's back.And now they were children no
longer; they were grown up and of
marriageable age. Bill's bright and
boyish dreams of driving an engine
or carrying a policeman's nightstick
had been laid away in the cedar and
lavender of the locked trunk we all
keep for our youthful ambitions.
Bee's visions of palm-clothed cannibal
islands and sawdust glories were no
more. Bill had just been admitted to the bar and Bee was just out of Vas-
sar. The idea of matrimony had,
somehow, got into their heads as a
part of the future, and they discussed
it in that calm and abstract way
which became two college graduates.They talked very learnedly of marriage "as an institution"; not by any
means agreeing upon all points of
theory but united upon one point in
practice: which was that each of
them should marry for money—for
each of them needed it. The little
that Bill's father had left him had
been mostly expended upon his education; Bee's parents lived in style,
but the style was kept up by an an-
nuity which ceased at her mother's
death."With your beauty and your intelligence, Bee," said Bill when they
were having one of their conferences
on the subject, "you ought to be able
to marry a great fortune. With me
the case is not so simple. Heiresses
are not, as a rule, given to marrying
briefless young lawyers, and if they
did have that habit I should be very
careful in making a choice; the wom-
an I marry must have attractions for
me outside of her money. I will never marry a woman for her money
alone, but the woman I marry must
have money."B stands for beautiful and Bee was beautiful. Launched in society she
had plenty of admirers, and there
were several young men who plainly
indicated that they would like to be-
come something more to her—if they
had a little encouragement. True to
her plan Bee saved most of her smiles
for those admirers who were possessed of wealth. Among them was a certain George Talcott whom she
preferred above all others. She found herself thinking about him continually. Here was just the man she and
Bill had imagined for her husband.
But now that the plan so carefully
elaborated was evidently about to
come to a successful conclusion a
strange nervousness and feeling of
doubt took possession of her. All at once the plan appeared to her de-
testable. George proposed—and was
rejected.Bee slept but little that night, and
the next day went down to Bill's law
office to tell him all about it. "You
know that wonderful plan of ours,
Bill," said she."Ye-es," replied Bill with a rather
sheepish look. "I was coming to see
you about that. I have got something
to tell you. It was a great plan—but I am afraid it won't work. You and I have been like bother and sister
ever since we were little children. We
have always planned our futures and
confided our plans to each other. You
remember how once you planned to
be a bareback rider in the circus and
I to be a policeman? Those plans
somehow went fluey—and I guess our
great joint matrimonial plan has gone
he same way.""I guess it has," sighed Bee.
Bill looked at her in a puzzled man-
ner. "Then you have heard?" asked Bill.

"Heard what?" exclaimed Bee.

"That I am going to marry Amy
adwell," said Bill."Amy Cadwell?" cried Bee. "Why,
he has no money.""Not a cent," replied Bill; "but I'm going to marry her. You see, I love
her.""Oh, you are all right," sighed Bee,
but I am afraid I am in love with
George Talcott—and I can't marry
him because he has money. It would
be too much like carrying out our wasteful old plan.""Nonsense," said Bill; "forget his
money and forget our infernal plan.
We made the plan together and you
see I have thrown it to the winds.
Forget it. George is sure to ask you
again and you say 'yes' this time.
You love him, marry him."It took but a little encouragement
to induce George to propose, again
and this time he was accepted. But see first told him all about the wonderful plan she and Bill had made—
and George laughed at it.HopeHope is all that makes life interest-

Old Time Hard Luck

"Alas!" sighed Alexander, "the world conquered and not a chance to get into the movies."—San Francisco Chronicle.

THE NADIR OF DEMOCRACY.

An engaging question is asked by that organ of stalwart Republicanism of the Calvin Coolidge type, the Ohio State Journal, of Columbus. It queries, "What of the Democrats?" Well, what of them? The State Journal thinks that the withdrawal of the president has improved the chances of the Democrats, but observes that they do not seem to be eager to take advantage of the situation. The assertion is made that the party might have an outside chance to win with Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, but would be doing little more than going thru the motions with any other man.

Opinions of many observers is likely to coincide with the editor. Yet Governor Smith may not be nominated and that largely because a considerable portion of his party has forgotten the older Democratic ideals and ideas. His nomination, even if it were made, is more than likely to lead to defeat as complete as that of previous candidates for another reason.

The Democratic party today is threatened with the fate that has overtaken other liberal parties in other countries. It is not radical enough for the truly radical folks and too radical for others. It bids fair to be caught between the upper and the nether millstones. It is not without significance that the party of Lloyd George has all but disappeared in England, but has given way to a Labor party, waving radical standards.

The traditional Democratic line of talk today is a political embarrassment. Democracy flew the banner of opposition to sumptuary legislation. Many people accept such legislation without apparent protest and then in practice proceed to break the laws with impunity. Your man fond of wine and beer today does not bother to waste time in political action or agitation; he brews his beer or gathers elder berries, grapes of blackberries and waits for nature to do the rest. This may be regrettable, but it is true. Many Democrats shrink from naming Mr. Smith for fear of losing the "sunbonnet" vote, as a wag has called it. Yet, without that liberal force the Democracy has little to offer.

Again, the party has spoken of its love for the "common people." But who wants to be a common person today? Even in business this slant toward the refinements of life is manifest. A great motor car manufacturer may be facing trouble today because his product, once amazingly popular, may have lost some hold upon the people. Thus, when the party attempts to tell the crowd that it represents them, the crowd says that it needs no shepherd, guardian or wet nurse.

Our brother in Columbus, we fear, asks a vain question. Fortune's wheel is at a low turn for the party of Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson. Perhaps its traditions, its strivings, its heart and its soul are needed badly in America today. But this does not help it in an immediate and practical sense. And that is the only thing which appeals to the bread-and-butter politicians. — Cincinnati Enquirer.

"The part of 'Monica' in 'The Understanding Heart,' will make Joan Crawford one of the foremost leading women in pictures."

This is the statement of Jack Conway, who directed this Cosmopolitan production now playing at the Met theater, and when it is remembered that Conway made a like observation concerning William Haines when that player was making "Brown of Harvard," it bears more than an ordinary amount of weight, for every prediction made by Conway for the young actor has since been fulfilled.

"Miss Crawford has all the qualities necessary for screen success," declares Conway, "and more, for she has a definite, electric personality that she manages to project on the screen without any apparent effort."

"As 'Monica,' I believe she gives a performance that will be numbered among the best ten of the year. She plays the role with intelligence, has never looked so beautiful and gives the part an innate refinement that is unusual in a girl so young. With each succeeding picture her face is becoming more plastic, and she has completely overcome the self-consciousness that at first handicapped her."

Chic Three-Piece Suit Is of Black, White, Red

Intricate but simple is this black, white and red three-piece suit designed for Dorothy Mackaill, the motion picture star. The skirt is of black and white-striped flat crepe. It has a wide black and red band at the hemline. The overblouse is of white satin. The jacket is of black flat crepe. The coat is edged around with two lines of white braid; two buttons draw it tight over the hips.

Ideas for Sports Wear Found on Golf Links

The increasing interest accorded golf by Frenchwomen is naturally responsible for increasingly attractive clothes for the occasion, and a visit to any of the golf clubs in the environs of Paris offers many ideas for sports wear. One's first impression is that Frenchwomen refuse to accede entirely to the utilitarian garments considered good form in England; and although the smartest women choose jersey and tweed for cool weather, even these are brightened by gay scarfs and hats, while for summer, silk crepes and linens compete with woollens.

A French golf course is decidedly colorful. The two-piece garment is the rule and, all spring, jumpers, skirts and cardigans made a popular combination. With the advent of summer, the cardigan was discarded, and the jumper, as well as the skirt, are often of the lighter fabrics.

Some players do not mind sunburn, and the sleeveless sweater or short-sleeved dress is sometimes seen. Most do, however, so that not only are long sleeves the rule, but the scarfs are important, unless the jumper or blouse be collared close to the neck. Hats are generally regulation sports shapes of felt.

Three-Piece Costume Is Choice of Many Women

The three-piece costume plays an increasingly important part in the current mode. It is now the undisputed choice of well-dressed women for practically every daytime occasion, so smart has the frock with its related coat proven.

In the evening, also, the ensemble motif is paramount, formal gowns, as well as the simpler type of chiffon dress, being accompanied by either matching wraps, or coats allied to frock underneath by some detail of trimming.

The vogue of the ensemble is due primarily to the trim appearance presented by a costume consisting of dress and coat designed expressly to complement each other. A matching outfit, or at least one with related details on the frock and wrap, is a far more pleasing creation than when the outer garment bears no relation to the gown underneath.

Kerchiefs Are Square Because Shape Is Liked

Handkerchiefs are square, and not oblong or round, because in 1784 Louis XVI, king of France, solemnly issued an edict from the palace of Versailles that only square handkerchiefs might be manufactured in the kingdom. Until then handkerchiefs had been long scarflike affairs.

But Louis XVI's laws being considerably out of date, modern handkerchiefs continue to be square not because the law demands it, but because customers prefer them that way since they fit into the pocket more easily than oblong ones.

New Sleeves

The "half-way" is the latest sleeve, which would be the elbow-length sleeve except for its unusual cuts, which may be flared, circular, puffed or tight with some odd cuff treatment.

WALKER TO BERLIN

New York Mayor's Arrival There Under Unhappy Auspices.

Berlin, Aug. 23.—(UP).—Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, will arrive here tomorrow under unhappy auspices.

While the radical press continued today to warn Walker that he is unwelcome because of the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, the Republican municipality of Berlin declined the American Club's invitation to be present at the Walker dinner at the Hotel Kaiserhof.

The municipal officials explained that they would not enter the hotel because the management refused on Aug. 11, German constitution day, to hoist the Republican flag.

Tactics and Strategy

Tactics is that branch of military science which deals with the movements of troops when they are face to face with the enemy or actually engaged in battle. It must be distinguished from strategy, which deals with the general conduct of a campaign.

HELIUM GAS FIRST DISCOVERED ON SUN

The discovery of helium gas on the sun preceded its discovery in commercial quantities on the earth by about 50 years. Lockyer in 1868 found a new gas in the spectrum of the sun while studying the flames shooting out from its surface. The gas was new because the color of the line representing it, when analyzed by the spectroscope, was distinctly different from anything previously known. Twenty-eight years later traces of the same gas were found in uraninite, and for the first time scientists knew that it was present on earth as well as in the sun. More years passed and it was discovered that helium was a product also of the disintegration of radium, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Still later, during the World war, Kansas housewives began to complain that the natural gas supplied for cooking was deficient both in heat and light. A university professor was sent to investigate and found in his samples that helium, a noninflammable, inert gas, was to blame. Its extraction in paying quantities from Texas gas wells followed.

Car No. 2— 1,000 miles 72.512 M. P. H.—less than 828 minutes

Car No. 1—15,000 miles 61.377 M. P. H.—less than 14,664 minutes

Car No. 3—15,000 miles 62.709 M. P. H.—less than 14,353 minutes

Sedan

Three Auburn 8-88 Stock Cars Ran Total of:

42,000 miles in less than 14,664 minutes

Daring and unprecedented. Far in excess of any test ever imposed on stock cars. Not done behind pad locks and timed by factory employees, but publicly, under American Automobile Association sanction and supervision.

We decided to go to extremes never before undertaken by any manufacturer in order to completely, conclusively, and overwhelmingly prove Auburn is a faster, more efficient and more durable stock car.

Through blinding fogs; through down pours of rain, under the hottest sun in years; 28 thousand times around the 1½ mile track on slippery boards; never have men and machines endured such abnormal strains!

Nine drivers, working relays days and night, could not over tax the endurance and speed of the Auburn cars. Old records completely smashed from 5 to 5,000 miles for fully equipped stock cars. New records at every revolution of the wheels from 5,000 to 15,000 miles. The speed was phenomenal . . . 34 new stock car records . . .

But What Of It?

We knew all along that Auburn cars are that fast. But, it is not Auburn's proven speed superiority that is most significant . . . frankly, that was easy and incidental. What is important is the fine character of car necessary for all three cars to survive such speed.

How's This For Proof?

After one of the roadsters had run the unequalled distance of ten thousand gruelling miles, in less than 9,479 minutes at an average speed of over 63 miles per hour, it was taken off the track, thoroughly checked—necessary replacements made—tuned and greased.

Then, for 1,000 miles more, this same car spurred forward at over 72 miles per hour. That proves reserve power, speed and endurance unknown in motor cars until now.

Another Thriller

After 2,637 miles, the Sedan running at about

70 miles an hour speed, turned over on the wet track, during a rainstorm in the middle of the night, slid on its top with all four wheels in the air, for about 50 feet, righted itself and then crashed into the railing. Two doors and three fenders were torn off, radiator and windshield smashed. Seven hours were spent for photographs, radiator and other body repairs and the car went back on the track. It caught up with the other cars, and finished the 15,000 miles at over 62 miles per hour speed. That proves the strong construction, and endurance of Auburn cars, although because in the accident, it lost three fenders and two doors, its entire distance cannot be counted as an official A. A. A. record, but it was officially timed by the A. A. A.

Triple Proof

It would have been perfectly startling if one car had broken all these records, but three Auburn cars were in this test—and all three of them did honor to the name of Auburn.

"WOODPECKERS" AID UNCLE SAM IN ECONOMY PLANS

Save the Government Several Million Dollars Yearly by Thrift and Efficiency.

Washington.—"The Loyal Order of Woodpeckers"—Uncle Sam's economy fraternity—has saved the government several million dollars in the last year by thrift and efficiency.

Under the guiding eye of the budget and efficiency bureaus, federal employees have saved supplies, utilized equipment to the utmost, and labored with as little lost motion as possible.

Sale of surplus government supplies brought in hundreds of thousands of dollars, it was stated at the treasury. Much of these materials had been rotting or rusting away from nonuse.

Then the government gained quite a profit through telephone coin boxes in departmental buildings. By a working agreement with the telephone company, the treasury collected a portion of the receipts from coin slots while federal phones could not be used for personal calls.

Many departments economized by personal cuts. In many instances high salaried employees who resigned were replaced by employees at much lower salaries.

Running the government costs $4,000,000,000 annually and because of this huge outlay no economies, no matter how small, could be overlooked. Rubber bands were used over and over, until Postmaster General New exclaiming he could get some of his around a bass drum.

The Agricultural department even used its pay envelopes over again. Employees when paid returned the envelopes, thus saving the container and also the labor of typing the name of the receiver on each envelope once more.

At the Commerce department paper clips were used until they were "worn thin," chain envelopes were used for interdepartmental communications, pencils sharpened to their erasers and paper written on both sides for economy.

The Navy and War departments used their communication facilities to send commercial messages and also practically all the government's business, collecting funds for the treasury and at the same time saving other governmental agencies money on transmitting communications.

The Woodpeckers were inaugurated by General Lord, director of the budget, to "peck away" continuously at unnecessary expenses.

Vacationist Remembers Cat; Calls Out Cops

Chicago.—It was a quiet evening in the Oak Park police station when a breathless messenger boy arrived with a telegram from Robert Regan, 533 South Wenonah avenue, Oak Park, who is in Eagle River, Wis., for his vacation.

"I forgot about my cat when I went away," read the telegram. "He's been alone without food in the house for three days. Please rescue him."

Sergt. William Koerber raced to the Winona avenue address. He pried open a window. A large cat leaped out on him, scratched his face and fled. A squad was called and searched the neighborhood. The cat finally was found under a hedge. It distributed more scratches before it was caught.

A second telegram arrived at the station. "Please take care of Thomas until I return," it read. "He is a good cat and deserves the best of care."

Four scratched Oak Park policemen sent a reply. But the telegraph company wouldn't transmit it.

Man Eats but Fraction of Total Food Supply

Yonkers, N. Y.—Burning 8,900,000,000 tons of coal, 8,900 times as much as the world produces in a year, will release about as much energy as contained in the sunlight captured annually through the production of plant foods. Of this huge total, the human race uses less than two-tenths of 1 per cent, according to an estimate by Dr. John M. Arthur of the Boyce Institute for Plant Research here.

Every day each one of the 1,750,000,000 human beings on the earth consumes about 2,000 calories of food. Even meat comes indirectly from plants. The human race is therefore dependent on photosynthesis, the process by which the plant uses sunlight to form food. The total consumption of food during a year by man amounts to about 1,200,000,000,000 calories. All of the other animal life, vertebrate or invertebrate, large or microscopic, on the globe is estimated to consume about six times this amount.

This Man Served on Jury Every Year Since 1908

Memphis, Tenn.—When it comes to serving on the jury, Lawrence W. Akers, a Memphis man, can tell all about it. He served on some kind of a jury every year since 1908.

Even though the duties of citizenship at times threaten to break up his home, ruin his business, and always gives him a vacation that he doesn't want, Akers has had little luck in getting out of jury service. When called as a venireman the first few times he acted with good grace, for he thought he was performing a civic duty. But with civic duty calling year after year, Akers got tired.

But the judges laugh at his excuses and ask for reasons. Akers stays on the job.

PREHISTORIC MONSTER LIVES

Recent expeditions into the swampy, almost impenetrable fastnesses of southern Japan have brought back photographs giving the first authoritative evidence that a monster differing little from those of prehistoric times still survives in the moist jungle. It is a one-horned, rhinoceroslike creature, its hairless hide covered with small horny scales, says Dr. P. Vageler, German Zoologist, in Popular Mechanics. Enormous front teeth resembling those of a hippopotamus. Natives call it the "tanggiling."

Watermelon a Vegetable

The Department of Agriculture says that while the watermelon is botanically regarded as a fruit, the horticultural and legal aspects of the case classify it as a vegetable, so that it would be known as a vegetable. It is grown as a vegetable and marketed as a vegetable, and the court decisions have been that it shall be considered a vegetable.

Instead of making a fool of a man a woman furnishes the opportunity—and lets him do the rest.

MOTORCYCLE TRAILER IS NEW VEHICLE

The photograph shows Mr. Butchers, owner of the new motorcycle trailer caravan, camping on the Isle of Man beside his novel outfit. This is a good idea and will be readily taken up by out-of-doors lovers of this country.

PREPARING FOR TOURING TRIPS

Sleeping Shelter is One of Most Important Items to Be Considered.

Never, since the covered-wagon days when our forefathers threaded the trackless wilderness, has any traveler been so much in need of self-reliance as the modern automobile tourist and camper. "Be prepared" should therefore be the motto of every motorist who intends to get fullest enjoyment from his touring trips.

Question of Shelter.

Assuming that the tourist has provided himself with enough suitable clothing, food, bedding and cooking equipment, his next thought is likely to be about a sleeping shelter. It will be found that the outside tent arrangement, consisting of a tent erected on one side of the car so that the car may be used as a dressing room, is satisfactory for all-around conditions. More elaborate equipment, such as sleeping trailers, can, of course, be purchased.

In buying a tent it is best to get one of balloon silk because of the small space this material occupies when it is folded. See that there is provision for keeping out flies and insects, and that there is a good floor. If you are not sure that your tent is waterproof, coat it with some waterproofing agent.

Watch Water Supply.

Take proper care of foodstuffs, and remember, too, that the water you carry must be used not only for drinking and cooking, but also for the cooling system of your car. Special water bags which hold an adequate supply can be obtained.

Last of all, don't weigh down your car with camping articles of unnecessary bulk. Cots, stoves, etc., should be of the most compact type, so that they can be fitted readily into the space your car provides.

Clock Acts as Traffic Cop in Kansas Capital

The alarm clock, faithful servant of the American home, now is being employed as a warning that the business man's automobile has been parked long enough and that it's time to move on.

With a two-hour parking limit in the business section of Topeka, several houses have installed alarm clocks in the offices. At the end of the two hours the alarm rings. A man gets up, hurries out and moves all the automobiles belonging to employees of the company.

The alarm is set up two hours and the performance repeated. So it goes throughout the day. Business houses are using the idea and claim it works to perfection. More and more establishments are reported taking up the move.

Clutch on New Car Apt to Grab More Abruptly

The clutch on a new car is likely to work a little more abruptly than one on a car that has been broken in. The plates on the new clutch take hold so gently during the first stage of clutching that the driver imagines they are not taking hold at all. He may then let the pedal back through its final engagement much too suddenly. When the clutch is older its plates grab a little more. The driver notices the engagement of the clutch taking effect sooner and thus is more careful during the final release of the pedal.

Give Automobile Brakes Most Careful Attention

It will pay motorists to test their brakes every day after taking the car out of the garage. It isn't being over-cautious to apply them within the first block, whether it is necessary or not, just to determine that nothing has gone wrong since the car was last used. It may mean the difference between life and death some day, and the test thus may be regarded as a ramification of the definition of nature's first law of self-preservation.

Striking Color Names

Radiator Whistle Gives Warning to the Driver

Your motor always seems to overheat and start boiling the water if you have the misfortune to have happen at all, at night when you can't see the thermometer on the radiator, or when, in the daytime, your attention is concentrated on the road or the scenery.

Of course, if you are going slowly in traffic the escaping steam will rise to warn you of trouble, but when you are traveling fast, you may not notice that something is wrong until serious damage has been done. A good way to make an infallible steam indicator is to solder a small whistle to the end of the overflow pipe, as shown in the illustration. Day or night the shrill blast of the whistle blown by the escaping steam will warn you to stop and investigate. A warning signal of this type is particularly valuable if your car is fitted with an automatic hand-controlled radiator shutter. When the hand-controlled type, the whistle will blow and warn you to open the shutter if you happen to forget it. Popular Science Monthly.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

Lindbergh was lucky not to have a back seat driver.

Also, how does the weak tire know you're not carrying a spare?

A reckless motorist always tries to pass everything, including the back seat.

Another great need is an automobile that cannot be driven from the back seat.

The modern idea of roughing it is to drive with one window open in a closed car.

However, the quest for plenty of parking space is what built up many a mighty empire.

One of every five persons in the United States owns an automobile according to a recent estimate.

Cars that claim 90 or more miles an hour could well be advertised: "Will last the owner his lifetime."

Some people take poison, others drown themselves, and still others try to pass another automobile on a blind curve.

The news that there is only one automobile for every three thousand residents of India is mighty good publicity for India.

E. C. TURNER LOOKS LIKE A CANDIDATE

Attorney General May Seek Governor's Office and There are Others

Two political announcements of importance are expected to be made within a short time.

Both of these will have a bearing on the contest for gubernatorial nominations next year.

One is the declaration by Attorney General Edward C. Turner, that he will ask for the nomination on the Republican ticket. Turner has been on the verge of making his announcement for some time and the numerous speeches he has recently made have indicated he was preparing to enter the race. He will undoubtedly have a large following and he has waited before making a definite statement to learn how his candidacy would be received. The assurance of support have been sufficiently numerous and of such a character as to give him belief he can secure the support of a majority of the Republican voters at the primaries in August, 1928.

He will have several candidates in opposition and the contest promises to be exciting and filled with the attendant features, which have marked campaigns on the Republican side for the past three campaigns.

Congressman James Begg, of the 13th district, has already practically declared himself a candidate. In addition it is expected, Colonel Carmi Carmi Thompson, of Cleveland; Congressman John G. Cooper, of the 19th district; Myers Y. Cooper, of Cincinnati, defeated in the election of last year; former Secretary of State Thad Brown, who was a leading figure in the last primary; Auditor of State Joseph Tracy and several others will all seek the nomination. The field will not be lacking for material.

The other announcement is from Congressman Martin L. Davey, of Kent, national representative from the 13th district. He will seek the nomination on the Democratic ticket. It is probable he will have no opposition, the Democratic leaders having seemingly agreed that he is the strongest man who can be chosen. Governor Donahey has announced repeatedly he will not be a candidate again but will seek the nomination for United States senator if he decides to continue in the political field. While the primaries and election are more than a year away the situation is much discussed and is the chief topic of interest at the state capital, even going beyond speculation as to the nominee for presidency.

Chilled Postage Stamps Cool Florida Tongues

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Chilled postage stamps gave St. Petersburg tongues a surprise when the stamps were licked before being affixed to letters and postcards. For St. Petersburg's stamps are now served right out of cold storage.

Work has been completed on a cold-storage room in the new parcel post station, which is an adjunct to the city's famous outdoor postoffice. The temperature will be maintained between 36 and 42 degrees, making one of the coolest spots in Florida.

The stamps are being kept in the room to prevent the mucilage from becoming hot and "sticky."

WONDERFUL ANIMAL IS THE SEA CRAB

The sea crab is a wonderful animal and could teach man something that would greatly enhance his chivalry, says Robert O'Neal of Tampa, Fla. The females shed their shells during the early spring, which leaves their bodies white and tender and a lure for small fish, at whose mercy they would be in short order, but Mr. Crab attends to all this in true husband style. While his mate is feeding along the shore in shallow water he follows closely and guards every attack with his strong claws. I have watched this performance often with interest from the shore for some distance. The female wanders leisurely along apparently unconcerned, while the male is kept busy grabbing at the numerous fish as they constantly make a rush for a bite. Should he cease his vigilance for a moment his mate would soon be seized and devoured. When the male crab eats or sleeps is a mystery.

By H. IRVING KING

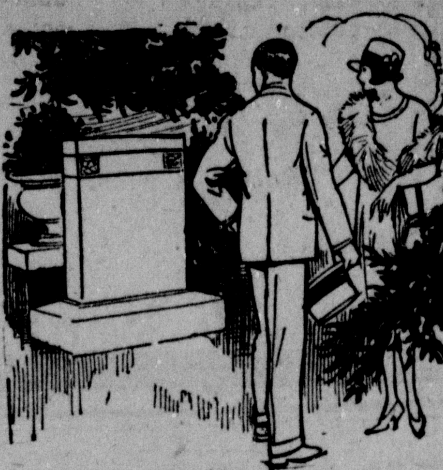

(Copyright.)

WHY his parents had named him
Clarence it would be hard to say.
But his middle name was William and
when, after a careful preparation by
a tutor at home, he was sent to school
at the age of fourteen and the boys
learning that his name was Clarence
began to jolly him be, by a happy inspiration, insisted that his name be
ing also William he should be called Bill. After "punching the heads" of
several youths who failed to comply
with this demand, Bill he became
She had been christened Beatrice
which easily glided into Bee.From an early stage of the game
they were accustomed to discuss their
respective futures with each other—
from the days when Bill was unde-
cided whether he would be a police-
man or an engine driver; and Bee
hovered between becoming a missionary or an equestrienne, like the young
lady she had seen jump through a
hoop from a horse's back.And now they were children no
longer; they were grown up and of
marriageable age. Bill's bright and
boyish dreams of driving an engine
or carrying a policeman's nightstick
had been laid away in the cedar and
lavender of the locked trunk we all
keep for our youthful ambitions.
Bee's visions of palm-clothed cannibal
islands and sawdust glories were no
more. Bill had just been admitted to the bar and Bee was just out of Vas-
sar. The idea of matrimony had,
somehow, got into their heads as a
part of the future, and they discussed
it in that calm and abstract way
which became two college graduates.They talked very learnedly of marriage "as an institution"; not by any
means agreeing upon all points of
theory but united upon one point in
practice; which was that each of
them should marry for money—for
each of them needed it. The little
that Bill's father had left him had
been mostly expended upon his education; Bee's parents lived in style,
but the style was kept up by an an-
nuity which ceased at her mother's
death."With your beauty and your intelligence, Bee," said Bill when they
were having one of their conferences
on the subject, "you ought to be able
to marry a great fortune. With me
the case is not so simple. Heiresses
are not, as a rule, given to marrying
briefless young lawyers, and if they
did have that habit I should be very
careful in making a choice; the wom-
an I marry must have attractions for
me outside of her money. I will never marry a woman for her money
alone, but the woman I marry must
have money."B stands for beautiful and Bee was beautiful. Launched in society she
had plenty of admirers, and there
were several young men who plainly
indicated that they would like to be-
come something more to her—if they
had a little encouragement. True to
her plan Bee saved most of her smiles
for those admirers who were possessed of wealth. Among them was
a certain George Talcott whom she
preferred above all others. She found
herself thinking about him continual-
ly. Here was just the man she and
Bill had imagined for her husband.
But now that the plan so carefully
elaborated was evidently about to
come to a successful conclusion a
strange nervousness and feeling of
doubt took possession of her. All at
once the plan appeared to her de-
testable. George proposed—and was
rejected.Bee slept but little that night, and
the next day went down to Bill's law
office to tell him all about it. "You
know that wonderful plan of ours,
Bill," said she."Ye-es," replied Bill with a rather
sheepish look. "I was coming to see
you about that. I have got something
to tell you. It was a great plan—but I am afraid it won't work. You and I have been like bother and sister
ever since we were little children. We
have always planned our futures and
confided our plans to each other. You
remember how once you planned to
be a bareback rider in the circus and
I to be a policeman? Those plans
somehow went fluey—and I guess our
great joint matrimonial plan has gone
the same way.""I guess it has," sighed Bee.
Bill looked at her in a puzzled man-
ner. "Then you have heard?" asked
him."Heard what?" exclaimed Bee.
"That I am going to marry Amy
Adwell," said Bill."Amy Adwell?" cried Bee. "Why,
he has no money.""Not a cent," replied Bill; "but I'm going to marry her. You see, I love
her.""Oh, you are all right," sighed Bee,
but I am afraid I am in love with
George Talcott—and I can't marry
him because he has money. It would
be too much like carrying out our bestest old plan.""Nonsense," said Bill; "forget his
money and forget our infernal plan.
We made the plan together and you
see I have thrown it to the winds.
Forget it. George is sure to ask you
again and you say 'yes' this time.
You love him, marry him."It took but a little encouragement
to induce George to propose again
this time he was accepted. But Bee first told him all about the wonderful plan she and Bill had made—
and George laughed at it.HopeHope is all that makes life interest-
